

Editorial

With this edition of Synergy we bring you another interesting selection of diverse articles, each celebrating or exploring a different aspect of our profession. We hope that you are finding the new Synergy website a supportive and attractive home for the journal. We are very proud of it and how it has developed since its inception. You will note that the full archive of all past digital editions has now been added to the site.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank Sue Osborne for her excellent work in writing the Online Life section of the journal since the first edition of 2017. Her article in this edition will be Sue's last in this section. Over the last couple of years Sue has endeavoured to have us all carefully consider the power and the possibilities made available through cultivating an online life and we appreciate her passion and constant encouragement.

With this edition we would also like to thank Julie Lindsay who joined us as our guest for 2019 writing the Reflections and Actions section. It has been wonderful to have her thoughtful and insightful contributions in Synergy. We appreciate all of the wonderful contributors to the journal and thank Sue and Julie for being a part of the journal during their time with us.

I commend to you the new Synergy ebook that celebrates the richness of the first fifteen years of the journal's life and I am thrilled to draw your attention to the review of the ebook, written by Professor Emeritus Dianne Oberg, in our Reviews section, which is ably coordinated by Dr Rosemary Abbott.

This edition of Synergy contains a very diverse selection of articles covering various levels of practice and a range of different approaches and ideas. There is something for everyone in the school library and beyond.

Happy professional reading everyone!
